Accredited Reinsurer status: If an insurance company has accredited reinsurer status in a particular state, domestic cedents in that state may take financial statement credit for reinsurance ceded to such accredited reinsurer, as an asset or a deduction from liability. Therefore, if an unlicensed reinsurer has accredited reinsurance status in a state, it does not need to collateralize its obligations to cedents in that state. An insurer with only accredited reinsurer status in a particular state may not write direct insurance business in that state. A company with an insurance license can also reinsure the lines of business that it is authorized to write directly.
